Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

"We Go The Distance For You"

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

No Water, No Timers, Not Quite A 10K And Look Out For The Train

By Dan Rattiner

So three of us were sitting around talking about how we could have a footrace in the Hamptons.

"It'll be a minithon," the runner said.

"Oh no," I said. "Who's going to run 23 miles?"

"No. A minithon. A short marathon. Only 10k. 10 kilometers."

"What's that in miles?" I asked.

This was twenty-five years ago. I was talking with a police officer, Tom Gabriel, who had brought a friend of his up to my office to talk to me about having a running race in the Hamptons. The friend knew a lot of details about exercise and running, something that no ordinary people did at that time.

"Let me show you what I have in mind," I said, handing the runner a map. "I thought we could run up and down the roads out here, past all the potato fields, past the Babinski Farm with all the dairy cows. There's two great ponds on the Baldwin Farm you can see along the route I have in mind, along Scuttlehole Road. Lots of ducks. It will be a really pretty run, up Scuttlehole, down Hayground, across the Montauk Highway, down Newlight Lane into Mecox, then back to Dan's Papers."

The runner looked at the map. "Your run crosses the railroad tracks," he said. "Twice."

"So? If there's a train coming, they'll have to stop. Wait. You guys aren't stupid, are you?"

This was my second meeting with Officer Tom Gabriel. For the first one, up in my office here in Bridgehampton, he had come alone. He told me a lot of people were starting to get interested in running, getting exercise. It was the coming thing. He had run in a running race in New York City they called the New York Marathon. About a thousand people had run. It was lots of fun.

I was skeptical. There were no running races anywhere on the East End back then, which was 1978. Jimmy Carter was President. The Cold War was at its peak. A good building lot for a house in the Hamptons could be had for $20,000. This was a very long time ago. The dark ages.

> There were no running races anywhere on the East End back then... Jimmy Carter was President. The Cold War was at its peak.

"You'll be the first," Tom told me. "I guarantee you lots of people will come."

The next day, I called him. I would do it. It might be exciting. And it would show off the East End community. We'd start it up in the Bridgehampton Shopping Center (home of Woolco), have the runners go up Snake Hollow Road to Scuttlehole, through all the potato fields up there north of the highway, then we'd cross the highway and go south of it, through more potato fields on Paul's Lane, then to the Bridgehampton windmill and back to a finish line at the Bridgehampton Community House across from the Candy Kitchen.

"We'll give out trophies," I said. "Right in front of Dan's Papers. People will walk back from the Community House."

That runners would have to cross the Montauk Highway from north to south immediately after crossing the railroad tracks for the second time did not seem to be a problem to me. I'd call the police chief of Southampton, whom I knew, and he would have an officer out there stopping traffic in both directions for ten minutes so we could do that. It would be like a school crossing. The cars could wait. There really weren't many cars on the Montauk Highway back then.

I could see at least four good reasons to do this thing. One was that it could help these exercise people introduce their new "thing" here on the East End. Two was that it could show-

RETRACTION

In a "South O' the Highway" item in the May 2, issue of Dan's Papers, it was incorrectly stated that Kim Cattrall would be appearing in a series of promotions for KY Jelly, touting the product for a broad range of uses. No such promotion is underway and Kim Cattrall is not working with the company.

CORRECTION

In a story about Leslie Jenneman last week, we inaccurately reported on her activities on the night of the accident she was in. The accident occurred on a Wednesday night, not a Saturday night, and she was not "picked up at a bar," but was attending an Artists-Writers dinner at the restaurant Saracen in Wainscott. She brought her car in for repair the following day, not on the subsequent Monday. We apologize for the errors.

case how pretty the Hamptons are, which might result in more people coming out east to visit, thereby boosting the local economy. Three was that it could give people who ordinarily came out here something to do on an otherwise quiet Memorial Day weekend. I'd run it Sunday morning. Maybe late Sunday morning after people went to church. Everybody would be pretty settled in for their weekends. It would be something to break up the monotony, which might have settled in by that time from the routine of beach, shopping, reading and watching TV. And four, it would be good publicity for the newspaper.

"I've got a good name for this," I said to the officer and his friend. "Everybody's going to be running past potato fields. We'll call it the Dan's Papers Potatohampton Race."

"It's important that word minithon is in there," the runner said. "That way people will know it's a 10K."

"Whatever," I said. "The Dan's Papers Potatohampton Minithon."

Thus a tradition was born. This year we are marking the 25th running of this annual event.

"How many people do you think will show up?" I asked back then.

"Maybe fifty. Seventy-five. Everyone will very much appreciate this."

And so we had the event, advertising it ahead of time in Dan's Papers and asking people to stop by the newspaper office or just show up at the event on the appointed day at the appointed hour. A lawyer friend had advised me, when he heard about the race, to have people sign a release before they start running so if they slipped on some cow dung and hurt themselves while running they wouldn't sue me. Or maybe they WOULD get hit by the train.

"You're right," I said. "I don't want any trouble."

I recall that at the time I was thinking — these are the people who WANT me to do this race. Running fanatics. How could they sue me? I'm doing them a favor.

On race day more than two hundred and fifty people showed up to sign releases at a table we set up in the parking lot of the Bridgehampton Shopping Center. I had set up there without anybody's permission. It was a parking lot. On that day I had a map of the running route printed and I gave it to the runners and then herded them over to the eastern side of the shopping center parking lot. I had borrowed a salute pistol and had the Town Supervisor fire it. The runners surged through a piece of crepe paper I had strung across the side entrance to the shopping center on Snake Hollow Road — it closed off the shopping center for only three minutes — and these runners, in a huge pack, headed up Snake Hollow Road and across the railroad tracks for the first time without incident.

I jumped into the car I owned at the time, a 1974 Chevy Chevette, and roared west from the parking lot, past the Bridgehampton Drive-In, past the Grotto of the Purple Grape Restaurant and up to Hayground Road where I turned in to head up to where the runners would cross the railroad tracks the second time. They would be coming south, toward me. I pulled over and got out of the car. Soon, I could see them coming and I could see that no train was coming and so I got into my car, did a u-turn and went down to where the police were setting up for a roadblock on the Montauk Highway.

This was going off like clockwork. At the Montauk Highway crossing, I could see the lead runners who had crossed the tracks coming down Hayground Road toward me and the roadblock on the highway. More runners were strung out behind them. I heard the train whistle.

After the trophies were handed out on our front lawn about an hour later, Officer Tom Gabriel and I had a post mortem up in my office about how things had gone.

"Overall," he said, "pretty good. Just a few things."

"What?" I said. I was slouched down exhausted in the chair behind my desk.

"Some people needed to go to the bathroom."

"You can't just ring people's bells and ask to use the bathrooms here," I said.

"They make those portable toilets."

"What else?"

"You need water along the route. It was a hot day."

"People knew that ahead of time."

This Old House

Changing Perspectives About A Mansion Down At The Beach

By Dan Rattiner

"That's the Evan's residence," people say as they drive past a particularly large oceanfront mansion. "Bought it for $12 million."

How much something cost is a pretty common way of referring to a house out here today. It was not always so.

"That's the Benson place," is how it used to go. "His grandfather was in steel. See that tower on the top? That was built by Benson's father for his crazy Aunt Gladys."

Times change. What people find important changes. That's how it goes.

One of the most interesting stories about a house, a story I find somewhat disturbing, is about what happened to the Tillinghast farmhouse, built in 1736, on Woods Lane in East Hampton. No, this is not a story about historical preservation, although in a sort of peripheral sense, it is.

The farmhouse was part of a compound of buildings on the corner of Georgica Road and the Montauk Highway, just west of the village of East Hampton. Actually, this is the last stretch of the highway before the sharp left turn at Town Pond that brings you onto Main Street, and along this stretch, which is known as Woods Lane, there are magnificent elms that overarch the highway creating, in the summertime, a great leafy canopy of green under which you pass. The Jewish Center of the Hamptons is on your left. In front of you, where the road turns left, you can see the white picket fence of the Hedges Inn and the James Lane Cafe.

The farm buildings are on the right. The westernmost is the newest of the three. It has a large barn and the remains of a tall silo behind it. The property is still in the Tillinghast family. The easternmost building, built by Tilinghast in 1876, has been restored to its original condition and is today the Centennial House B&B. In the middle of these two buildings is 17 Woods Lane. And the story of this one is the one that is disturbing me.

> What bothers me about all this is what happened to the dream of Lynne Breslin. All that money, and all that effort, gone to waste.

Most people know the Tillinghast family as the proprietors of the old G&T Chicken House on Race Lane (Schmidt's Market today). The farm, a dairy farm, was owned by the grandparents of those people, and they prospered for many years. Around 1960, however, the dairy went out of business and the farm buildings were subdivided into lots so each building could become a private residence. The one facing Woods Lane, however, fell into disrepair.

In 1995, a Manhattan architect named Lynne Breslin bought the Woods Lane property. She applied for a permit to restore the building and enlarge upon it and it was granted. Work commenced. And for the next two years, it continued. The house was raised on railroad ties so a new foundation and basement could be put under it, sideways so that if you rotated the house 90 degrees, which they did, there would be room for a swimming pool. Three old additions were removed, and in their place went a wall of glass. Pretty soon, there was almost nothing of the old house left, although the dimensions of it were the same, except for the new additions granted in the permit. There was now a swimming pool, a dining room with French doors, and most interesting of all, a new garage, built as part of the basement, which one got to by driving a car down a driveway to an automatic garage door.

The work was done lovingly and carefully, and as I drove by it every day, I was able to watch it all evolve. These were boom times and people were buying bigger and bigger mansions in these parts. I suspected, and I was correct, that Lynne Breslin was building this house as a showcase for her work and as a "spec" house. She never moved into it. After the second year, 1997, with the house done and the property beautifully landscaped with gardens and lawns, she put a For Sale sign out front alongside another sign indicating that she had been the architect.

I never met Lynne Breslin, although I almost did. After the house went on the market, her office called me up and offered to give me a tour of the place so that perhaps I could write an article about it. I might have done it. But, for whatever reason, this was a busy time and I never got around to it.

The house remained for sale for five years without a buyer. Perhaps it was the price. I don't know. Surely, Breslin had sunk over a million dollars into it. Then, last year, it did sell, to a group representing an Orthodox Jewish Congregation looking for a place to build a synagogue. Within six months, they had bulldozed the whole place down. Now, as you read this, they are building an entirely new building on the site.

What bothers me about all this is what happened to the dream of Lynne Breslin. All that money, and all that effort, gone to waste. But more importantly, a house that from the moment it was completed to the moment it was torn down, never had the sound of a family in it. There were no children running around the living room sofa. No conversations around the dining room table. No dogs scratching at the family room door.

Years ago here in the Hamptons, you could make a good living in the house-moving business. People considered their homes to be members of the family. If they moved — and sometimes they moved just a few miles away — sometimes they'd take their houses with them. It was not an uncommon sight back then to see large homes, sometimes cut in two or three in deference to the telephone wires, being hauled down Main Street by big trucks from one property to another. There was a firm in Patchogue that would come out east to do this. There was the Kennelly House Moving business on County Road 39 in Southampton.

One year, Kennelly moved a big farmhouse that had been on Parsonage Lane in Sagaponack right around the corner to Town Line Road. It was still on the same farm property. Why they did that I do not know.

Some people will remember a huge controversy about the building of a nuclear power plant in Shoreham. It went ahead in spite of demonstrations and protests, and they spent $6 billion on its construction getting it virtually completely built before a court ruled they could no longer continue.

Though the East End was dead against this project, the County Executive of Nassau County came out in favor of it. I went to see Bob Kennelly and asked him what it would cost to move the power plant to the front lawn of the Nassau County Court House in Mineola. It was a theoretical question, but he tackled it and with his expertise came up with a plan using barges to get it to Mineola for $2 billion. I published his plan. Many of his relatives, he later told me, called from out of state to congratulate him on having landed such a big contract.

"Some wanted to borrow money," he said.

I guess people just don't respect houses like they used to. They buy one and if they don't like it they tear it down, crazy Aunt Gladys' tower and all. What do they know?

Certainly you can't fault the Jewish congregation for what they did. The house had spent five years trying to get sold. It wasn't happening. And Lynne Breslin had already done so much to the farmhouse that the town felt there was no basis for saving what Lynne had built.

The earth spins. Attitudes change. Things come and go. That's the way it is. •

Scientific Breakthrough About A New Way To Get To The Hamptons

By Dan Rattiner

I read an interesting article in the magazine Nature this past month about teleporting, as in disassembling atoms in one place and reassembling them in another. It was pretty technical, but it made me sit straight up. I've been driving up and down the Montauk Highway every day for many years. We are approaching gridlock. And the only answer, it seems to me, is teleportation. For example, we could put people in a glass tube on the Upper East Side, push a switch and disassemble them, and reassemble them on, perhaps, Indian Wells Highway and Bluff Road in Amagansett. When we can do that, we can roll up all the roads.

The amazing thing is, according to this article in Nature, that early attempts at doing this have been actually successful. "Beam me up, Scotty" may soon, or at least someday, happen.

The article describes experiments being done at the University of Geneva in recent days. A scientific team, led by Dr. Nicolas Gisin, has successfully disassembled protons and light beams in one building and then reassembled them more than a mile away in another building. I am not making this up.

This is a giant step forward in the distance that this stuff has previously been sent. In 1993, Dr. Charles H. Bennett of the IBM Thomas J. Watson Research Center in Yorktown Heights was able to disassemble things in one place and then reassemble them in another, but the distance was just two feet. The feat turned a few heads, but not many. This is not adequate to get from Manhattan to Quogue. A mile is another thing entirely.

Government officials with bull horns and guns will roam the streets of the Hamptons, shooting motorists in Hummers...

Here's a fuller explanation of what happened. First of all, that it could happen was postulated in the 1930s by Albert Einstein (long before Star Trek), who developed a facet of quantum mechanics that he called "spooky action at a distance." How he thought it might work is certainly not clear to me in any way that I could explain to you, but what happened in Yorktown Heights was that a practical application was developed using pairs of entangled light particles. You could destroy one of them, and then send the other from point A to point B. Because the two pieces, one whole and the other destroyed, were still entangled, the pieces would arrive wherever they were sent with the "remains" of the destroyed piece still there in an odd sort of way, and with the whole light particle able to restore itself to its original structure. Voila!

The early attempts worked only in one case in about a million and only over short distances because that was the distance of the light wave the pair traveled on. Now, they have perfected it enough so that very long light waves can be used. The record one was one and a quarter miles from the original location. There the two entangled light particles reappeared.

People have questioned Dr. Gisin about his experiments. He points out that humans are very complex creatures, made up of literally trillions of pieces of matter. Being able to successfully transport one piece out of a billion was a long way from transporting a trillion out of a trillion.

An associate of Dr. Gisin, Dr. Hugo Zbinden, noted that what they did was all very well and

"You should set up bridge tables and have paper cups with water pitchers by the side of the road. Like lemonade stands."

"I guess we could have done that," I said.

"Maybe three of them."

"That would be a lot of work."

"Well then maybe just one. Also, it really wasn't 10k."

"I drove the route ahead of time. You said 10k was between six and six and a half miles. It was between six and six and a half miles."

"Yeah, but not exactly."

"Why do they need it exactly?"

Neither of us talked much about the runners who had to stop and run in place while the train went through. He had talked to me about it at the awards ceremony and my comment was that if they had run faster, like those that were ahead of them, they would have gotten through without having to do that. But I knew that in the second year, and I knew I would do this a second year, I'd have to get a train schedule and have the run either earlier or later so as to allow that train through. There were then, just as there are now, whole hours or more when no train comes through in either direction.

"Other than that," he said, "it was pretty good. And we especially liked the t-shirts."

I had ordered and made up fifty T-shirts. We had run out, of course. For the next year, I thought, we really would have to print more. And to do that, and to do some of the other things that he talked about, I knew it would involve spending some serious money. For the second year, it would be helpful if the runners might pitch in and pay for some of this just to cover the costs.

"Do you think that some of the runners might donate some of the money we need to run this thing next year?" I asked.

"Didn't the registration fee cover everything?" he asked.

"There was no registration fee," I said.

"Are you sure? I know I didn't pay a registration fee. But I thought it was just me. Because I gave you the idea."

"It was free," I said.

There was a long silence after that.

"Well you know what?" he said. "The runners, and most of them were from New York City as you noticed, are used to paying a registration fee. Five bucks. Ten bucks. And if you are going to do that, you could hire one of those companies that can do official timing. They can give people their exact times. People like that."

"I could do that," I said. I was thinking, boy, are runners spoiled. What would they need that for?

Well, from that day to this, we have run the race 24 times and after this race it will be 25, all in a row. After the second race, which drew 400 people who paid $5, we had money left over. I gave it to Southampton Hospital. Over the years, money left over and money from sponsorships have brought more than a hundred thousand dollars to a wide variety of charities.

If the runners weren't spoiled enough with all the things they wanted after that first race, after the second they had us break it into a wide variety of categories for trophies. There would be more than a dozen winners in more than a dozen categories. 12 and under. Walkers. Handicapped. 70 and up. And so forth and so on. Spoiled brats.

After that, they wanted us to run it earlier in the day before it got too hot. We changed the time we started the race to 9 a.m. sharp.

Then we got complaints from the runners that they couldn't challenge their personal bests if they had to stand running in place while the train tooted by. So we changed the route so the race was entirely south of the Montauk Highway, except for the start, which ran down Main Street to the cheers of the crowd.

The cheers of the crowd brought our race to the attention of the various churches on Main Street holding services on Sunday morning. So we changed the race day to Saturday so as not to interfere with services.

Then the Bridgehampton Fire Department asked that it not begin or end in front of the firehouse because for that length of time it blocked the exits of the volunteers who might need to take the equipment out to cover a fire. That made sense. So we changed the route so it would keep the fire house entrance clear.

Amidst all these route changes, one year, leading the race through a new route in my car, I got lost. Almost a thousand runners followed me on a merry detour that made the race 11k that year instead of 10k.

Then there was the year we had four days of downpour of rain prior to race day and the whole thing had to be postponed because much of the route was underwater. I recall people booing that final decision. They'd come out early in the morning. They wanted a race. They would swim. I said no and postponed it until August when it was over 100 degrees and several runners suffered heat prostration and had to go to the hospital in ambulances.

There were the years when a local farmer, John White, would show up and give each of the finishers a potato. And there were the years when two guys showed up dressed in French fried potato costumes and ran the race.

There were years when the race was won by Olympic team runners. And there were the years when it was won by high school teachers. There was the year the computer owned by the professional race timers crashed and we had to guess who won the various divisions.

Through it all, we've had a wonderful time. We've raised a lot of money. And we've made a lot of friends. I would say that, over the years, there have been maybe a thousand people who have made contributions to the success of this race. I lift a glass to all of them. And if I try to think of four or five who have made special contributions, they are these:

Barbara Gubbins, who in the past fifteen years has won the women's division ten times, a remarkable achievement.

Linda Shapiro, who has organized the event for the last eleven years in a row, and who has worked tirelessly with her crew. Thank you.

Keith Field, a local man, who won the race five times in eight years and has been the only person to win the race that number of times. A remarkable achievement.

Peter Jennings one year, Mr. G. another year, all sorts of celebrities in other years, thank you, thank you for handling the starting gun duties.

Matt Feder, a summer resident, who came to the race unannounced for ten years driving a Harley Davidson to lead the pack at the front for the entire 10k, invariably playing a copy of the CD "Chariots of Fire" very loud on his Harley stereo the entire way.

John O'Conner, who has made a lifetime achievement out of running quickly and running well, and who won his age group half a dozen times during a ten-year period.

All the police people, fire people, church people, ambulance people, everyone. Thank you. All the sponsors of the race over the year, Self Magazine, New York Magazine, Evian Water, the Bridgehampton Country Store, Ray Lingwood, King Kullen, the list could go on and on.

See you Saturday, May 24, 2003, 9 a.m. for the running of the 25th Annual Dan's Papers Potatohampton Minithon. •

Murder Unsolved

5 Friends Of A Suspect In The Ammon Murder Case File A Lawsuit

By Dan Rattiner and Kirk Cassels

Rumors are swirling that after all these months, there has been a break in the Ted Ammon murder case and that an arrest is imminent. As you may recall, Ammon, a prominent Manhattan Investment Banker, was bludgeoned to death in his lavish Middle Lane home in East Hampton in October 2001.

Now five friends or family members of a prominent figure in the case, Daniel Pelosi, have filed a complaint and a lawsuit against the Suffolk County police, claiming that on the weekend of April 4 and 5, 2003, just a month ago, they were roughed up, threatened, lied to and prevented from contacting their attorneys by members of the Suffolk County Homicide Squad, which soon after the murder had been called in to investigate the affair.

The object of the Homicide Squad's alleged wrath, it would seem, if the charges are proved true, is Daniel Pelosi, an electrician from Manorville who did electrical work around the Ammon vacation house, installed the burglar alarm (which was found after the murder in the OFF position), was openly having an affair with Mr. Ammon's wife who was in a divorce action with him, and subsequently married her after her husband's death. Pelosi is currently in jail, serving a one year sentence for violating parole for numerous arrests for driving drunk.

The details of the claims against the Sheriff's office by the friends and family of Mr. Pelosi, all of whom live in western Southampton or eastern Brookhaven, follow.

It is worth noting that since the murder, Mrs. Generosa Pelosi has become terminally ill. And the Ammon fortune, estimated at about $70 million, will upon her death, pass to Daniel Pelosi.

According to the lawsuit, the trouble began early on Friday, April 4 2003. It was then that Daniel Pelosi's ex-wife, Tamara Pelosi, was pulled over at 8:30 a.m. on the Long Island Expressway for not signaling before switching lanes. Her day only got worse, as police claimed there was a warrant out for her arrest. The police officers handcuffed her, brought her to the Seventh Precinct house in Shirley for questioning, and denied her initial requests to contact her lawyer. Pelosi's request to contact her employer, however, was eventually granted, but not until police transported her to the Fifth Precinct house to process her misdemeanor charge. After this excruciating series of events, she reportedly experienced a panic attack and fell to the floor in the station.

The lawsuit also alleges that on Saturday, April 5, four other individuals were arrested and harassed. Officers in an unmarked car pulled over Christopher Parrino, Daniel Pelosi's cousin, in Rocky Point and, allegedly, told him he was under arrest for murder. Parrino claims he was shackled in an interrogation room in the Yaphank police headquarters, and that a detective smacked the back of his head with an elbow and pushed him against a cinder-block wall multiple times. While Parrino was interrogated, two detectives approached his fiancée at his house. Allegedly, the officers told her that Parrino was arrested on a DWI charge. They then began to inquire about the murder of Ammon.

Ted Ammon

Meanwhile, police tracked down Frank Perrone, another friend of Daniel Pelosi, in Queens that same day. The lawsuit states that, after Perrone complained about how tight his handcuffs felt, officers swatted him across the face. In addition to not allowing him to talk to his lawyer, wife or employer, officers, allegedly, never told Perrone why he was under arrest.

Alex Mawyer of Mastic Beach and Arnold Cherubino of West Babylon are the other two individuals involved in the lawsuit. Friends of Daniel Pelosi, they were not physically abused but were allegedly harassed. According to the lawsuit, police detained Mawyer for a grueling twelve hours in another precinct. The officers claimed that Pelosi's sister, Barbara, signed a statement that said Mawyer's face was seen on Ammon's surveillance camera system during the weekend in which the millionaire was murdered. Disbelieving the detectives, Mawyer delivered a tirade upon the officers immediately after their claim and refused to participate in any further questioning without the presence of his attorney.

If the lawsuit proves correct, Cherubino got off the easiest. But that does not mean it was a pleasant experience. When police approached Cherubino, they allegedly told him he was being arrested for interfering with the investigation. The officers questioned Cherubino about a visit that Pelosi made to his house during the weekend of Ammon's murder because they believed that Pelosi asked Cherubino to destroy a heap of bloody clothes for him. However, the lawsuit claims that police eventually charged Cherubino with nothing and escorted him home.

As of Monday, May 12, the lawsuit has not been officially filed. If it is, however, it will, undoubtedly, put the Suffolk County Police Department under the microscope. At this early stage, spokesmen for the force remain loyal to their officers and open to a fair discussion and investigation of the incident. In fact, John Gallagher, the police commissioner, invited the individuals to file a complaint through the department's Internal Affairs Bureau instead of going through with the lawsuit.

Since the above was written, there have been further developments in the Ammon case. On Monday, the sister of the late Ted Ammon filed a lawsuit seeking to gain custody of the twin 13 year old children of Ted and Generosa Ammon saying that Generosa suffers from "Paranoid" episodes, and her new husband, Daniel Pelosi, who is now the children's step father, but who is currently in jail, is unfit. The sister, Sandi Ammon Williams, has filed the lawsuit in the Brooklyn Federal Court.

From Miami To Montauk

Carl Fisher Creates A City In Florida, Then Tries To Re-Create Montauk

By Jerry Cimisi

Before Montauk, there was Miami. Carl Fisher, after having marketed the first automobile headlight, built the Indianapolis Speedway and was the force behind the first major east west highway in America. He also created a city: Miami Beach.

Fisher came to know southern Florida by accident. One Christmas holiday he was on his yacht in the Gulf of Mexico with his new wife Jane and a bunch of friends. It was a belated honeymoon trip. They hit some very bad weather. The ship ran aground off Mobile Bay. For a while it was a bit like Gilligan's Island, without Ginger's gowns. They ate canned food and caught fish. After ten days they were helped by a passing oyster fisherman, who secured a winch to extract Fisher's boat.

The Fishers quickly headed back to their home in Indianapolis. One of his friends would captain the boat around the Florida Keys up to Jacksonville, where the boat would be shipped north. But shortly after the Fishers arrived back home they got a telegram that the friend had reached Miami and was staying there a while. "MIAMI PRETTY LITTLE TOWN. WHY NOT MEET ME HERE...." So the Fishers went back down south. It was February, 1910. Miami had been incorporated in 1896. It had about 10,000 people. Fisher fell in love with the place, bought two lots and a house he had seen only in a brochure, and began talking about making a 20 mile long penninsula off the coast of Miami into a major winter resort. He drew diagrams in the sand of the city that he would make rise from the swamps.

And these were terrible, mosquito-infested swamps. Creating Miami Beach was a huge task. At the time, Fisher was involved in pushing another major American highway, what came to be called the Dixieland Highway, two north-south routes that converged in Florida. This would bring millions of people to Fisher's vision being wrested from the swamps.

Fisher was not the first to envision something spectacular for Miami. It happened one day when the Fishers were out on the penninsula across from Biscayne Bay, when they came upon a man in his seventies, well dressed, standing in the middle of nowhere. This was John Collins, who had tried to grow avocados but who had been stymied with the difficulties of shipping them out of the wilderness of southern Florida. He was trying to build a bridge in the bay, but he lacked the funds. Fisher was so impressed with Collins that he loaned him $50,000. In exchange, Collins gave Fisher the title to 200 acres, waterfront, in what was to become Miami Beach. Later Fisher would have business dealings with Collins' children, who had already told their father avocados wouldn't work, but perhaps the area had potential for something else.

To clear the swamp, mangrove trees were pulled up by manual labor at first. In the summer the workers' backs were covered with mosquitoes. Eventually a sort of tractor was applied to the job. Biscayne Bay was dredged. Land jutted out into the newly reshaped waters, land that was sterile and dried into a sand that whipped over nearby boaters and fisherman when the wind blew.

Not only did Fisher build a city in this former swamp, he landscaped it, hiring hundreds of black workers to plant vegetation. In 1917, he hired two renowned Japanese horticulturists to refine replanted Miami Beach.

Old John Collins had built his bridge across Biscayne Bay in 1913. Miami Beach was incorporated in 1915. By the 20s, the Collins' bridge could not handle all the traffic that had sprung up in the area, and the old bridge was replaced by a new bridge called the Venetian Way in 1926. By the early '20s, most of the roads had been paved. In 1917, Fisher was opening Miami Beach's first hotel. The Lincoln Hotel had 35 rooms. By 1920 there was a joke going around: that the only thing in Miami Carl Fisher didn't control was love. Comedian Will Rogers, joked that Fisher had the mosquitoes in Florida so well trained they wouldn't bite a man until after he bought land in Miami Beach.

By 1925, Fisher was making a million dollars a month from the city he had created out of swampland. It was estimated that his personal wealth at this time was $100 million. As he put the finishing touches on Miami during the "Roaring Twenties," he brought polo, speedboat racing, golf and circuses to southern Florida. There is a photograph of Fisher, about to swing a golf club—while he is standing on the head of an elephant. President Harding came to vacation in Miami Beach, as did Al Capone.

But even as Miami Beach was rising out of swampland, Fisher was thinking about developing a resort in the north. He thought about the north shore of Nassau County; it was the era of The Great Gatsby and the Gold Coast, but perhaps these areas presented projects that just weren't big enough for his vision. He set his sights on land more than 100 miles from Manhattan: Montauk. With more than 12,000 acres and twenty-five miles of waterfront, Fisher saw it, in 1925 as "the last piece of big property to be had in this country." Fisher always wanted the next biggest challenge; this was it. And why shouldn't he be successful? In Miami Beach, he had to literally create land to sell; here the land was, simply, there.

By 1926, he had three dozen backers for the project. He hired salesmen to bring prospective buyers out from New York City. A sales office an associate had rented in New York displeased Fisher; he felt its locale would attract the "wrong class of people." He switched the location to a more prestigious address.

With the autumn of that year, Fisher claimed he had sold $700,000 worth of property in Montauk—at an average price of $11,000 an acre, no small sum in those days. And if Montauk was to be a summer resort (Fisher advertised if you were sweating the city you could wear a sweater in Montauk), Fisher pushed those lots right through the winter. In the middle of

December a group of bankers, lawyers and real estate agents took the nearly three hour train ride from the city (at that time the railroad went out only as far as Amagansett) The weather was clear in Montauk when they left. But by the time they got there, a rough cold rain pelted the visitors, who nonetheless explored the sand dunes and vistas of this easternmost end of Long Island.

Fisher got more excited — and confident — with his Montauk vision. Contrary to usual real estate practice, when certain lots did not sell, instead of lowering the price, he raised them, giving the impression that business was hot and you had better buy in before the price climbed higher.

Fisher did have big plans for Montauk: golf, polo, tennis, indoor and outdoor swimming.... In fact, just maybe he'd make it a year round resort — there would be ice skating, tobogganing, a casino open all year round

By the summer of 1927, the railroad had a Montauk Station. Railroad official were promising fast connections from not only New York but also Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Boston. Fisher was going to dredge a channel from Block Island Sound to Lake Montauk, and build a dock for fifty ocean liners.

There was the 200-room Montauk Manor—surely many a convention would be hosted there. And a "skyscraper," at least by Montauk standards, a six story office building right in town.

It was also the era of Prohibition — which it was a great attraction for people to go somewhere to get illegal booze. Fisher responded to reports that there were wild drinking parties at Montauk Manor. He admitted that there were friends and businessmen that should "be protected" to some degree, but those who became too unruly should be given the boot. Fisher was very conscious of maintaining a certain image for his resorts. He wasn't happy about Al Capone spending time in Miami Beach. And he didn't want either Miami Beach or Montauk to have the riff-raff you might find in Atlantic City.

This image consciousness had its outright prejudices. Of Atlantic City, Fisher complained that "Negroes bathe all over the beach and there is no way to stop it," for they "practically control politics" there. An associate of Fisher's warned him that Montauk's relative proximity to New York City might draw too many Jews. Fisher brushed that aside, not because he had nothing against Jews, but because he didn't like to hear about obstacles in regard to his projects. Fisher was a man of his time, sort of a cross between Teddy Roosevelt and a turn of the century robber baron.

There were obstacles in Montauk, even before the Great Depression hit, following the crash of the stock market in October, 1929. First of all, by the end of the twenties, Fisher was having trouble in Miami Beach. In September, 1926, a terrible hurricane had hit, with winds of 130 miles per hour. It destroyed properties and buildings Fisher had not yet sold. And in Montauk, land just wasn't going fast enough. One of Fisher's colleagues said that Fisher had mistakenly thought Montauk was merely a northern Miami Beach. Florida had been for the most part wilderness when Fisher had begun his efforts there; Long Island wasn't so much of a frontier: there were a hundred miles of beautiful beaches stretching out from New York before one reached Montauk.

And then, some of the locals weren't too happy about Fisher. He was surprised they weren't. He saw he was doing a favor for the scattered fisherman of Montauk: he'd bring in tourists and restaurants to buy their catch. But he also wanted them to be no more than a small, picturesque part of the landscape, and not intrude on his modern, hip resort. He would take down the unsightly shacks of the fishing village and sell the fisherman out of the way land at modest prices. This did not sit too well with the long time residents of Montauk.

Fisher also wanted to displace the native animals; snapping turtles, skunks and eels; he would bring in more appealing creatures: game birds, etc.

At any rate, even before the Depression hit in the early 30s, things were slowing down in Montauk and Fisher was making use of large business loans, which at first were not too hard for him to get. He sold properties he had bought on Nassau's Gold Coast and plowed the money into Montauk, as he did the money he received from selling his interest in the Indianapolis Speedway. By 1927, Fisher said he had put more than $7 million of his own money into the Montauk Corporation and that $2 million in property had been sold.

The summer following the crash of the market, Fisher actually mentioned the possibility of selling his holdings in Montauk. There had been a hopeful moment that spring, when Robert Moses announced plans to build a highway crossing Long Island and ending at Montauk—but improved transportation on the Island would come too late for Fisher. He struggled on for a time, staging the sporadic spectacle at Montauk in order to draw people—such as coaxing the Navy to hold maneuvers off shore. But these were brief flares in a night that was settling in.

The worst year of the Depression was 1932. And that was when the Montauk Corporation defaulted, with $3.7 million of outstanding debt. The "skyscraper" in town stood untenanted. It wasn't until 1938 that the properties at Montauk were bought out. Throughout that grim decade of the '30s, Fisher continued to vacation in Montauk—and there must have a sadness to that. He was like an emperor wandering among the ruins of a kingdom that might have been. He died in 1939. Flags at Miami Beach were flown at half-mast. In Montauk, the fishermen did not miss him. •

Who's Here

Rikki Klieman Author, News Anchor

By Dan Rattiner

Rikki Klieman of Quogue, a news anchor at Court TV and a successful trial lawyer — Time selected her as one of the five most powerful women lawyers in the country — has written a book. It is not only about life as a lawyer. It is called Fairy Tales Can Come True: How A Driven Woman Changed Her Destiny and it is also about love. Her love.

I met Ms. Klieman over coffee in Manhattan last week. She is an attractive, no-nonsense, woman in her fifties who has enjoyed success after success in almost everything she has tried. The premise of her book, which is autobiographical, is how her priorities have changed ever since she met the man who has become her soul mate, husband and lover, in 1998. Almost everything she talks about is about this man, who is also in his fifties. After five years, the love still glows.

"Two people, finding this kind of love in their fifties. Imagine that."

Rikki Klieman was born and raised in a middle class neighborhood of Chicago called Hollywood Park. Her father was in the garment business, dealing in wholesale. Her mother was a housewife. For the first two years of her life, Rikki lived in an apartment above a Mexican variety store. She went to grammar school and then to Von Steuben High School where one day she came to ask her mother why it was that all the parents of her friends at school had numbers tattooed on their arms.

"This was the place, in Chicago, that Jews who had survived the Holocaust settled. All they wanted for their kids was a good education. The school was not a place that featured athletics. Just study hard, go to college, and make something of yourself. If possible, get a license to do something. A doctor. A lawyer. They cannot take that away from you."

The numbers were, of course, the tattoos the Germans put on the arms of everyone entering a Concentration Camp.

Rikki was an only child, and furthermore the child of a couple who had been married 17 years before she came along.

"All the time I was little, my parents called me 'Miss Remarkable.' After awhile, I got to believe it."

Rikki took dance classes when she was four, did her first acting in a play at eight, decided that when she grew up she would be an actress, and during high school worked in Summer Stock at the Little Theatre in Sullivan, Illinois. She got her equity card.

"My parents hardly encouraged me, but I couldn't blame them," she said. "After all they'd been through during the Depression, what they wanted for me was just something stable and certain."

She got her Equity Card. She worked with the actress Rose Marie Prinz in "Mary, Mary," performing the role Tiffany Richards. In college, at Northwestern, she performed in "Suddenly Last Summer" in the role of Catherine. She got her degree in Theatre. And she went to New York.

"I went to New York to be an actress," she said. "I was there for exactly one year by which time I thought this is a really dissipated way to make a living. I was working as a Temp. As a waitress. I was going to casting calls. I hated it. And so I went home."

She went home, thought My God, I've always wanted to be an actress, and crashed into a major life crisis. She did not know what to do with herself. Until one day, she talked to Franklin Haiman, one of her professors at Northwestern.

"'Why not go to law school?' he asked. I said 'Girls don't go to law school.' And he said 'No, but women do. Take the LSATs.' This simple conversation turned me around. It changed my whole life."

Rikki got a job back in New York with an outfit called VERA, a criminal justice think tank that did work, among other things, for women as well as men. They worked for bail reform, and were the first to do that. They did work on officers' and civilians' appearance control, that is, when these people would need to show up in court. They needed to be there only when it was the right time. Otherwise the cops should be out on the beat.

Rikki was assigned a job in the DA's office working closely with police officers, who at this time, could receive pay incentives if they did more schooling.

"I helped them with their homework," she said. "It was a very interesting experience for me. Here I was, born in 1948, someone who viewed cops as the enemy during the hippie era. I was 20 in 1968 when Woodstock took place."

"Were you active in the Hippie movement?" I asked.

"I was a good marcher," she said. "Anyway, now I was finding I really liked police officers. It was a 180-degree turnaround. I liked them as storytellers. They were good cops. They protected and served. And they really had a great party scene when they were off duty."

Rikki lived in a New York apartment owned by a woman named Evan Frances and her family. She became Rikki's surrogate mother, her mother away from home.

"I loved her family. We all worked around the house, cleaned up, did the dishes and so forth."

Then Rikki went to Boston University School of Law, graduated in '75 and worked for a year as a law clerk to Judge Walter J. Skinner in Boston.

"I really got interested in becoming a criminal defense lawyer," she said. "It seemed to work well as the closest I could get to acting. I would be a performer. I joined the office of John Kerry of the Middlesex District and stayed there for two years. I worked like a dog. During this time I lived in Cambridge. Then I worked for a new D. A., William Dellahunt of Norfolk County. He was highly progressive. He started the first juvenile diversion unit, the first domestic violence unit. I bought a condominium then in Boston's North End. It was such a sweet place. It was a duplex with a spiral staircase, a window overlooking Paul Revere's House. I registered to vote, which happened to be at the Old North Church."

"I saw Bill Bratton... 'You look so beautiful,' he said. 'If you were single, I'd marry you.' I was hooked."

Rikki married briefly when she was a senior in law school to another law student, but it didn't work out.

"We ended the marriage amicably," she said. "We are best friends to this day."

She opened her own law practice and buried herself in her work. She was indeed one of the best defense attorneys in the country and her work took her everywhere.

"I was working 14 hours a day, a driven attorney, on the outside. But on the inside, I would just collapse at the end of the day. I was often sick."

During this time, she met and married a federal agent who, she said, "took care of me." They were married eleven years.

I asked Ms. Klieman to describe her most celebrated case.

"I represented some Christian Scientists by the name of David and Ginger Twitchell. They had been charged with manslaughter for not seeking medical care for their 2 1/2-year-old son who subsequently died. It was a hard fought case, but the judge would not admit evidence showing that the couple had done everything they did according to Massachusetts law. And so they were convicted, but it was reversed on appeal."

Rikki Klieman first met the man who she says she will spend the rest of her life with, when she was defending a notorious figure, a woman named Katherine Ann Power, who had been a fugitive since 1970 for having participated in a bank robbery to get money for the Black Panthers. Klieman spent the year 1992 and 1993 trying to negotiate her surrender, but it was not until a new police commissioner for Boston came in, Bill Bratton, who said he wanted to close this case. Ms. Power was therefore able to plead guilty to manslaughter and completed six years of prison time.

"It was Bill Bratton. I saw he had charisma. And I liked that. But our relationship was professional, and when Court TV asked me to move to New York City to become an anchor there during the O. J. Simpson case, I really didn't give him a second thought."

"What were your feelings about that case?" I asked.

"I was not shocked by the verdict. We saw it every day. The case was badly tried. And the defense team bested them. They gave the jurors reasons to acquit and they did. The jury just didn't believe the police."

Klieman, at Court TV, anchored with Fred Graham.

"I consider him one of my great mentors. I wanted to stay in New York. I had a law firm and a husband in Boston. My husband did not want to come to New York. I had an apartment at 54th Street and Sutton Place. I was about as successful as it was possible to get."

And into this walked love.

"I was with my boss, A. Thayer Bigelow having breakfast at the Regency. He took all the anchors, one at a time, to breakfast. I wanted to go to the Regency. By this time, my husband and I had separated. I saw Bill Bratton, now working as a consultant, and going through a divorce himself, and I walked over. He lived at the Regency. 'You look so beautiful,' he said. 'If you were single, I'd marry you.' I was hooked. 'Why don't you call me for lunch?' I said. He called."

Rikki Klieman describes meeting Bill Bratton as if a thunderbolt had hit them. He felt the same way. "I had no choice," she said.

In the summer of 1998, Klieman and Bratton rented a little house in Hampton Bays. "If I could have," Klieman said, "I would have commuted to Court TV every day."

In the fall of 1998, Klieman and Bratton went off house hunting with a broker. They were to meet in Quogue. He had a house there to show them.

"We came out on the Jitney and got off at Quogue Street. I said this is where I want to live."

"Why was that?" I asked.

"Rural, simple, private, close. The house I saw was in the woods. On Peacock Path, bordering on a Wildlife preserve. We went inside and on the bed was a bedspread that was exactly the same as the bedspread on my mother's bed. There was a print by Robert Morris. I had one that was similar. I had lived in the woods outside Boston. This was in the woods. Nobody could see you on three sides. 'This is where I want to spend the rest of my days,' I told Bill."

They moved in on Thanksgiving Day, 1998.

And so they stayed there, Bratton, the former Police Commissioner of both Boston and New York, doing consulting work in public safety around the world, Klieman commuting to her job at Court TV.

"And then one day in July 2002, Bill came home from work and told me he had just been asked to apply for the position of Police Chief of the City of Los Angeles. He wanted the job. I would have to fly back and forth to see him. It was a five-year contract. So, for the next 48 hours, I went berserk. Because, though I felt so at home here, and liked the surfers and the local people — had even gotten to the point where I often resented the summer people — I knew deep down I would have to go.

"And so, lawyer that I am, I examined all the good but, "you're not very sure to arrive in one piece" at this level of success.

The future, the immediate future anyway, seems to be headed from bad to worse. Many of us remember the good old days when you could drive into town and park in front of the store you wanted to shop in, stay there as long as you wanted, and then drive off. (Sigh.) Now there is no parking of any kind anywhere within a mile of downtown and your only hope is to follow somebody with shopping bags that seems headed back to his or her car and when they get there, lurk about with your engine idling waiting for them to get in and drive off.

Soon even that effort won't be worth taking. Government officials with bull horns and guns will roam the streets of the Hamptons, shooting motorists in Hummers who try to bulldoze parked cars over the curb and onto the sidewalks.

Frankly, if you're in Manhattan and could successfully beam just a few hundred of your trillion cells out to the beach at Sagaponack for an hour or two, you'd probably do it. Even if it meant all that could go was the nail of your right big toe. At least some part of you could enjoy the surf and the sun.

Sometime soon, somebody is going to try this. The TV people will jump on it. Absolutely the last word in reality shows. • options. And I asked him why he had made that decision, why it was so important to him. And he said that being Police Chief of the City of Los Angeles was probably the greatest police challenge in America. And he knew he could do that job. He could make the city safe again. He could save hundreds of lives. He could mend bridges between the community and the police. What could I say to that? I told him I would be there for him."

Bill and Rikki see each other by airplane. She goes out there almost every weekend. He has agreed to do part of his summer vacations in Quogue. And the future on the East End?

"He has four and a half years more to go."

Eventually, though, Rikki Klieman has begun to make more decisions. She has decided to finish up her full time job at Court TV in June, and become a legal analyst and contributor, working from Los Angeles. She has decided to move out to Los Angeles for the remaining time, while eliciting a promise from Bill that he will agree to return to New York and the Hamptons after the five years. She has, after much thought, decided not to try to rent her house out for four and a half years and put it on the market. There will be another place then, she knows.

"And I have gotten a part in a pilot for a new TV series," she grins. "It's called 'The DA,' and Gil Garcetti got the audition for me."

Then Rikki Klieman smiled.

"I would and will give up everything for him," she said. "And I have become Mrs. Bratton and I kind of like who Mrs. Bratton is."

And she has written a book about her experience. It was published on May 6, 2003 by Regan Books, an imprint of Harpers Collins. It is a book of inspiration, of hope. •

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #248
What's in a Mouse?

Mother's Day, the most popular of the Hallmark holidays, started out like any other day. I did a load of wash, did dishes and had breakfast going by the time my kids got up and told me to relax because it was Mother's Day. On Mother's Day, Mom's can count on their families to treat them well for about an hour, sometimes ninety minutes, before the families remember how dull, boring and insufferable housework and cooking are, and then they scatter like rats from a burning building. They invent things they must do immediately. I loved it when my daughter said, "I forgot to buy you a Mother's Day card! I have to go to the mall right now before the stores close and get one." So, that took care of her. My other child, my precious boy who has autism, asked me, "Exactly how long have you been my mother?"

I decided to treat myself and watch a Disney video. I know all of them, I know the words to all the songs and I was in the mood. One of the advantages of being a single mom is that I can watch a movie of MY choice on Mother's Day. Back in my married days, my ex would give me his version of a perfect Mother's Day gift which was how I became a mother in the first place. Considering the esteem that men grant their sexual prowess, I'm surprised they don't all go around all day with a big bow on their flies waiting for someone to unwrap their "gift."

So while my daughter was at the mall where it would certainly take the remainder of the day to find me a card, and my son walked in a circle in his room talking to the other people living in his head, I settled down on the couch to watch Little Mermaid.

Then I paused and thought (always a bad idea for me), I'd really like to watch a Disney movie with a great Mom in it. Let's see, the Little Mermaid has a father, three sisters and an uncle who's a crab. Okay, skip the mermaid.

How about Snow White? Nope, mother died in childbirth. She has a wicked stepmother who's trying to get her heart delivered in a box while twelve small men raise her.

Cinderella? Nope, dead mother, wicked stepmother, rotten sisters, her only support system a lot of mice living in a tall tower.

Dumbo? Nope, mother is chained to wall in prison and her parenting skills are limited to sticking her trunk out of a window. Dumbo is being raised by another mouse.

Sleeping Beauty? Nope, mother is an absentee, allows her daughter to be raised in the woods by three fairies while she parties in the castle with the king.

Beauty and the Beast? Nope, mother is never even mentioned. Complete lack of parental supervision lands her in a cursed castle with a man who only looks like a beast on the outside but is really a prince on the inside — well, aren't they all?

Bambi? Nope, mother shot in the head, Bambi is raised by a rabbit.

Rescuer's Down Under? Nope, Mom lets her 7-year-old boy wonder around the Australian outback and lets mice organize his rescue.

Mary Poppins? Nope, mother is in politics and leaves the kids to a nanny who meets her boyfriend in the park while she's supposed to be watching the kids. After her employer loses his job, she blows outta town.

Jungle Book? Nope, dead mother, kid lives like an animal.

Ice Age? Nope, mother drowned, kid being raised by a mammoth and a meercat.

I don't know what Disney has against mothers, but it has to be linked somehow to his unnatural reverence for mice.

I abandon Disney and went through my video collection and finally found a perfect movie with a kick ass mom. I popped in the film in and just then the phone rang, a friend calling to say hi.

"So what are you doing today for Mother's Day?" I asked.

"Oh, John has a special event planned," she said sarcastically. I silently wondered if he had a bow on it. "What are you doing?"

"I'm watching The Terminator," I said.

"For Mother's Day?" she asked incredulously.

"Yea. Well, first of all there's no mice in it and there's just something about mothers, shotguns, hand grenades, and men that can be melted in molten lead that's working for me today."

EMILY TURNS TWO

Ok, this is a little self-serving, but having covered hundreds of parties this one became my favorite. Hamptons friends shortened their weekends to come and help celebrate my special blessing.

APPLE CARES

Cipriani hosted the first annual gala to benefit the Apple Cares Foundation last week. The Foundation is dedicated to improving medical and public safety responsiveness to emergent healthcare issues through the timely dissemination of information, a serious issue, but the night with dinner and dancing was pure party. Chevy Chase hosted the event, and familiar Hamptons faces who support so many charities included Denise Rich, Denise and Larry Wohl and Jeffrey Steiner.

THE RIKKI AND BILL SHOW

The party for Rikki Klieman's new hardcover, Fairy Tales Can Come True, at Elaine's last week was packed with celebrity lawyers, media elite, and just regular celebrities. Rikki and her husband, Bill Bratton, one of the Hamptons power couples, are always kind and friendly. The book chronicles Rikki's life from actress to trial lawyer to health problems to a happy ending with Bill and Court TV, and now an LA TV gig because hubby Bill is LA's Police Commissioner

Elaine's was also the venue for Rona Jaffe's book party celebrating her newest novel, The Room-Mating Season. The story deals with four young women with entirely different personalities shoehorned into a one bedroom townhouse apartment sharing the rent and most everything else. Rona is a familiar Hamptons personality with a great smile partially because her books have sold 23 million copies.

theartre review... tennessee williams' summer and smoke

Tennessee Williams is an American playwright of grand proportions and his writing has the complexity of character often shown in Shakespeare. His plays are sexually charged while also remaining beautifully poetic. He is often referred to as America's finest playwright. He experienced phenomenal success during the first twenty years of his career (the 1940's and 1950's) winning the Pulitzer Prize for playwriting twice with A Streetcar Named Desire (1947) and Cat On A Hot Tin Roof (1955). Many of his plays from this period, including these two and Summer and Smoke, were made into movies and have become American classics that are a part of our collective psyche.

Mr. Williams kept writing well into his 70s, and his new works continued to be produced as late as the 1980's. A few seasons back Vanessa Redgrave discovered a hidden treasure of his Not about Nightingales, which had never before been produced, and she mounted successful productions both in London and New York. Mr. Williams' writing is daring and multi layered. He ventures into the unknown areas of human behavior, the terrifying psychic realm, which lies below the surface. It is for these very reasons that producers, directors, and actors are drawn to his works, and that they are still performed all over the world today. Showtime television as recently as last week premiered a new made for TV movie, The Roman Spring of Mrs. Stone, based on one of Mr. Williams' short novellas. This same material had had an earlier incarnation as a 1960's film with Vivien Leigh and Warren Beatty. Therefore, it is not surprising that the Hampton Theatre Company would be drawn to the challenge of presenting the author's work and have revived his romantic drama Summer and Smoke.

Sadly in the current revival, as directed by Sarah Hunnewell, the actors are not up to challenges presented by the author, and the play which opened at Guild Hall's John Drew Theater last week is tepid at best. Minor criticisms aside, the sets and the costumes are nice. The actors playing the lead roles look their respective parts and speak their lines beautifully, however, when they are required to play with any level of complexity or show emotional depth their inexperience shows. There are moments within the play, which must be met by the actors playing the lead roles, if the evening is to successfully resonate with the characters' struggles and the conflicts inherent in the play. Without these moments the evening becomes sterile and the play remains, as on the page, a lyric tale of unrequited love.

When Alma (played by Felicia Pensiero) and John (played by Joe Pallister) come together, there needs to be a sexual intensity between the two, a chemistry which these two actors do not bring. We need to feel Alma's alarming discomfort at repressing her sexual desire for John, who after all is a wild rebellious youth at odds with her upbringing. She does, as John says have a "doppelganger" and is suppressing her true self. When John and Alma go on a date to Moonlight Casino, John is driven by a lustful libido that at once terrifies and seduces Alma. When she flees, it is not out of fear or disgust, but rather out of terror of giving in. In their final confrontation, when Alma confesses her true love for John, we must witness her façade crumble as she expresses her desperate longing for him. Alma has finally summoned the courage to surrender to John. The actress in this scene is reacting to John, not to the audience or to the sky as if she were looking for her lines. It is John she wants, and she has no chance of capturing him by looking away with feigned interest. When she realizes the truth her spirit breaks and crumbles beneath, while Alma struggles to maintain her composure. The actors are just too comfortable and without these moments the play remains a story without a soul, and the evening is nothing more than a poetic rendering of the author's beautiful words. The doppelganger is buried in cement.

Big Event Of The Week

You're A Good Man Charlie Brown* Opens In Mattituck

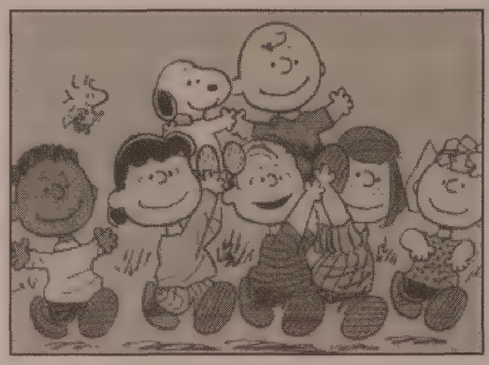
In the fall of 1950 – the beginning of an era when expressing unhappiness was the social equivalent of being rude — a 27-year-old Minnesota cartoonist introduced a group of children who unabashedly told one another the truth.

"I have deep feelings of depression," a round-faced kid named Charlie Brown said to a pragmatic girl named Lucy in an early strip. "What can I do about it?"

"Snap out if it," said Lucy.

Until this moment, the comics were dominated by action and adventure. Charles Schulz dared to use his own quirks — a sense of alienation, insecurity and inferiority — to draw the unspoken feelings of his time.

Few cartoons are as beloved to us as Schulz's Peanuts, and now the North Fork Community Theatre presents a musical about a day made up of many little moments, from Valentine's Day to baseball season, from wild optimism to despair, from all the days of Charlie Brown.



Performances begin this Friday, May 16, and continue through June 1, Friday and Saturday evenings at 8 p.m., and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. Tickets are $12. Call 298-NFCT. –S.W.Simm

Celebrating Long Island's Wine Region

On the evening of April 28, over 600 food and wine lovers headed to Guastavino's restaurant in Manhattan to celebrate the 13th annual Windows on Long Island Wine event sponsored by the Long Island Wine Council. The evening's program, which was a fundraiser to benefit EarthPledge, a NYC-based nonprofit organization dedicated to promoting local and sustainable agriculture and cuisine, emphasized the role of viticulture in preserving agricultural open space on Long Island's East End. This year's grand sponsor was Bosch Home Appliances Corporation. Guests sampled wine from 23 Long Island wineries, accompanied by superb cuisine from top New York City and Long Island chefs.

The event also celebrated the 30th anniversary of Long Island as a wine region. In 1973, the first 17 acres of vines were planted by Alex and Louisa Hargrave at Hargrave Vineyard in Cutchogue. During the evening's festivities, Louisa, together with Ann Marie Borghese – current owner with husband Marco of the original vineyard – cut the cake, celebrating 30 years, almost 3,000 acres planted, and more than 30 wine producers.

Wine guru Kevin Zraly, the event's master of ceremonies, said, "I have watched closely over the last three decades as the region's growth paralleled my own career in the wine industry. I have seen the quality and the interest in Long Island wines unfold and today these wines can compete on the same playing field as the world·s great red and white wines. It is with eager anticipation that I look forward to enjoying the vintages that are now being produced, over the next 30 years!"

Co-host Thomas Matthews, executive editor of the Wine Spectator, added, "The remarkable success of Long Island wines is a tribute to the power of vision and hard work. At 30 years old, Long Island's wine industry is officially entering its second generation. If it makes as much progress in this one as it did in the first, we will taste some memorable wines."

At the event, Jane Baxter Lynn, Long Island Wine Council's executive director, announced as part of the 30th anniversary celebrations that, subject to final permit approval, the Long Island wineries had been invited to present the First Annual Long Island Wine Classic, as the kick-off party for The Hampton Classic in Bridgehampton on August 23. The event will be supported by Wine Spectator.

Also attending was Julian Niccolini, co-owner of the Four Seasons, one of Manhattan's premier restaurants. The Four Seasons recently hosted for the first time a Long Island wine dinner and has invited the wineries back for another one on Thursday, September 18. "Something revolutionary is happening on Long Island," said Niccolini. "While the world gasps in shock and awe at the success of California wines, gifted vintners here in New York have been perfecting their craft and, today, are producing some of the world's most delicious wines."

Participating restaurants from the East End included: Waincott's Alison by the Beach, Greenport's Antares Café, East Hampton's Della Femina, East Hampton's The Laundry, and Westhampton's Tierra Mar.

Wine Spectator, Food Arts and the New York Observer were major media sponsors. Students from the Art Institute of New York City's culinary arts program provided invaluable help again this year and a portion of the proceeds will go towards a scholarship for the school.

Celebrating The "Best Of The Best" Of Our Local Dining Destinations

What's Cookin'

'Tis the time of year when we anxiously start scouting out our favorite farmstands for signs of summer. Horseradish, asparagus, and rhubarb herald the season as arugula, lettuces and over-wintering spinach follow on their heels.

While this process never fails to excite even dormant culinary instincts, perhaps those who get the most inspired are our local chefs. After a long winter hoping for freshness to arrive from around the globe, these masters of the range look ravenously forward to slicing and dicing the best the East End has to offer. And while the lushness of our mid-summer is indeed incomparable, it's always the sweet beginning that stirs us most.

At the Cooperage Inn in Baiting Hollow, which has recently undergone a beautiful expansion/renovation, chefs Michael Hegeman and Tom Laimo are busy enjoying their newly expanded kitchen. The two chefs strongly emphasize local ingredients and are already featuring baby spinach, mesclun greens, arugula, and asparagus from Riverhead's Schmitt Farms on their menus.

Down the road in Wading River, the lovely La Plage was packed on Mother's Day when I arrived to take a few photos. Chef/owner Wayne Waddington was hard at work in the kitchen and the always-creative menu featured local "grass" (as many farmers refer to asparagus) from Condzella Farms just around the corner.

Heading east, chef/owner Mark Mittleman of Fauna in Aquebogue was featuring a Mother's Day special appetizer of proscuitto di Parma, roasted red and yellow peppers and grilled asparagus drizzled with truffle oil. As one chef once told me, ANYTHING tastes better with a touch of truffle oil. Short of vanilla ice cream, he's right.

At Mattituck's Red Door, owner Stephan Mazzella has already featured local rhubarb this season in some of his legendary desserts. But even more intriguing is his use of local honey, an oft-overlooked North Fork product. Where does he get it? From an old farmer on Route 25 who keeps bees in back of his house. There's a little table with bottles for sale and no sign. Like the best the North Fork has to offer, sometimes you just have to know it's there.

Cooperage Inn. With a beautiful new look emphasizing the cooperage theme, this charmer continues to carry the banner of North Fork cuisine. Chef/owner Jonathan Perkins, along with chefs Liamo and Hegeman, produce inspired appetizers such as rare sesame tuna carpaccio and pan-seared fresh mozzarella, and don't miss the sesame crusted calamari served over field greens with a soy vinaigrette. Steaks are steakhouse worthy, and the rigatoni ala vodka continues to dazzle. Fish here is always pristine and cooked with a light hand. Coming this summer: outdoor Tiki bar. Entrees $15.50-$30. 2218 Sound Ave. Baiting Hollow. 727-8994. (Simm, 1/10/03). [B]

Mother's Day brunch at La Plage

Fauna. A hip and elegant culinary gem. Co-owner and consulting chef Mark Mittelman's menu astutely incorporates Asian influences into superbly conceived New American dishes. Tuna sashimi shines as an appetizer, as does duck confit atop sautéed spinach with walnuts and dried cranberries. Try and find room for the butternut squash pot stickers. The all-star cast of entrees includes Southeast Asian steak salad, pan-roasted bourbon chicken and a Napoleon of roasted vegetables. Desserts rotate daily. Extensive wine list with sixteen local vineyards. Entrees $20-$26. Route 25, Aquebogue. 722-5813. (Trueman-Honey, 6/7/02). [A,F]

Ile de Beaute. In a beautiful old house with courtyard tables, the spirit of Provence is alive in Greenport with highly authentic French cuisine. Its treatment of classics like escargots, French onion soup, and frogs legs runs the gamut from superb to extraordinary. Rack of lamb, served with rosemary sauce reduction, is masterly. Desserts are tasty and the crepe options are best expressed in exponential notation. Service is deliberate but attentive. Entrees $24-35. 314 Main Street, Greenport. (Bradbrook, 7/12/02). [D,H,I]

La Cuvee Wine Bar & Bistro at the Greenporter Hotel. Gourmet bistro dining adjoining a hip boutique hotel footsteps from Greenport's vibrant downtown. The casually upscale dining room creates a pleasing environment for a light and adventurous menu. Seafood appetizers like tuna tartare and the sublime mussels in coconut and lemongrass broth bear an unmistakeable Asian influence. But executive chef / owner Deborah Rivera's culinary artistry really announces itself when the entrees arrive. Long Island duck in an orange-infused coconut sauce is impressive enough, but topped by her otherworldly Chilean Sea Bass poached in a miso-sesame broth. Exceptional wine list, with by-the-glass offering many pleasant surprises. Entrees, $21-$26. 326 Front Street, Greenport. 477-0066. (Bradbrook, 4/25/03).

La Plage. Exciting and imaginative haute cuisine just steps away from a Long Island Sound beach. Chef/owner Wayne Wadington's menu undergoes constant revision, reflecting his selection of premium ingredients or his latest inspiration for a sauce. His creations fly off the menu almost as quickly as off the

Historic Greenport: Whales, Bunker, Rum, And A Ride Back In Time

In 1838, Greenport, a flourishing whaling port, became the second incorporated village in the United States. At the height of the whaling boom in 1844, the railroad came to Greenport and the village became the main link in the rail-steamboat route between New York and Boston.

With the decline of the whaling industry, commercial fishing increased and the fleet of "bunker boats," which went out after menhaden, kept the local yards busy with repair work during the 1920s. But thanks to Prohibition, the fishing fleet wasn't the only source of income for the shipyards. Because of Greenport Harbor's proximity to open waters, it became a favorite of rum-runners. A Coast Guard station was also opened in the village during the 20s, and local yards did a brisk business, not only repairing rum boats, but keeping their Coast Guard pursuers up to speed as well.

Today, the vintage carousel in Greenport's Harbor Front Park, is a reminder of the village's rich historic past. –Compiled and edited by S.W.Simm plate, but if you have the chance, put in for the Yukon Gold potato soup with an oyster beignet, the roulade of local crab with succulent micro greens or the Griggstown Farm quail in smoked bacon. Superb wine list. Exceptional desserts. Entrees $22-33. 131 Creek Road, Wading River. 744-9200. (Bradbrook, 11/1/02). [R,V]

Modern Snack Bar. Home-cooked meals away from home await you at this charming family-run restaurant operating since 1950. Wittmeier brothers' time-honored menu contains dishes too good to go out of style. Delectable sauerbraten is perfectly tender and the stuffed cabbage very good. Duck breast salad, recently introduced, is another winner. Crabcakes and lobster salad are real treats, but the big surprise is the world-class shrimp and crabmeat quiche. Home-baked desserts are splendid and their take-out pie business is brisk. Wines are mostly limited to local vintages. Reservations not needed, but day or night, it's always a crowded house. Entrees, $9-$17. Rt. 25 Aquebogue. 722-3655. (Bradbrook, 10/4/02) [T].

Pepi's. Dazzling panoramic views of Peconic Bay and sumptuous Northern Italian cooking combine for a sensuous dining experience. Appetizers include a highly flavorful vegetable antipasto and a fresh tri-color salad of arugula, radicchio, and endive. Penne ala vodka, often predictable, is anything but here. The penne is served perfectly al dente and the sauce is both smooth and smokey. Also delicious is chicken Sorrentino, with eggplant, proscuitto and fresh mozzarella. Come dessert, do not miss the tiramisu, co-owner Nick Nikolov's specialty, an all-time keeper. Entrees $16-19. Port of Egypt Marine, Southold. 765-6373. (Bradbrook, 6/8/01). [K,O,Q]

Red Door. Red Alert! Stephan Mazzella, formerly of Lespinasse, has opened a fine new restaurant in Mattituck. His menu is quite versatile and his consistently tasty dishes excite the palate. Typically adventurous and successful is the pan-seared monkfish with a yellow tomato sauce and black olive purée topped by crispy fried leeks. Mazzella's treatment of fish epitomizes Greek and Italian-style preparation at its best. The appetizer of heirloom tomatoes with boccocini mozzarella and fresh basil and balsamic vinegar is a tomato dish for the ages. Innovative desserts, too. Entrees – $16–$28. 13560 Main Rd., Mattituck. 298-4800. (Bradbrook, 6/14/02). [E,N]

Chef Meehan of the Seafood Barge

Ross' Rotisserie and Smokehouse. A casual, homey eat-in or take-out spot opened by John Ross, former chef/owner of Ross' North Fork Restaurant. Great rotisserie and crispy fried chicken; marinated, honey-glazed duck legs; hickory-smoked spareribs; homemade soups and chowders; many cooked-from-scratch side dishes. Every Friday fish fry is an excellent value. A special 6-pound LI duck, cooked crisp, boned and quartered, accompanied by duck sauce and a garnish of apricots and cranberries ($19.99) is available by reservation the day before. Open 7 days 12-8. Route 48, Southold, 765-9655. (Simm, 10/5/01). [U]

The Seafood Barge. The North Fork restaurant for fish lovers. Owner/manager team of Dick Ehrlich and Betsey Flinn are as fanatical about results as Steinbrenner/Torre. Newly imported executive chef Michael Meehan updates the menu's standards and introduces several of his own specialties. Vichyssoise spiked with crab meat and basil oil was a rousing success. Marinated baby octopus with baby spinach was succulent and tender. As for the fish, the sushi appetizer continues to be stellar. The pan-seared striped bass with a red pepper broth is a revelation. Desserts are sensational. Excellent wine list, particularly local vintages. Entrees $24-$32. Port of Egypt Marina, Rt. 25, Southold. 765-3010. (Bradbrook, 7/26/02). [M,S]

Sultan's Kitchen. At last, a good, authentic Eastern Mediterranean for the region. The emphasis is on Turkish cooking, one of the world's healthiest cuisines. The spacious dining room is non-descript, as this is a former pancake emporium; the subtleties are all in the flavoring of the food. Soups such as red lentil and tripe are spiced just right. The varied appetizers favor vegetarians while the main courses concentrate on lamb and chicken, often with delectable results. Turkish baklava and kadayif are exceptional finishing touches. Entrees $6.50-$15.95. 1077 Old Country Road, Riverhead. 369-9766. (Bradbrook, 8/9/02.)

Healthcare Cuts Hurt You, Me, And The Local Economy

Governor Pataki wants to cut Medicaid and add additional taxes to hospitals, and your courageous State Legislators voted against him. Continued support, in the form of letters, faxes, emails and phone calls to these legislators voicing your appreciation and opinion are vital to prevent these proposed budget cuts. These cuts will adversely affect your community hospital, the health of you and your family, and ultimately the local economy.

If enacted, about $1.1 billion of these new cuts and taxes will significantly impact all hospitals in New York State, and specifically, weaken the ability of Eastern Long Island Hospital to continue to provide the level of high quality health services that the North Fork and Shelter Island residents have depended on for nearly a hundred years.

A financially healthy hospital is a major part of a strong local economy. Eastern Long Island Hospital has a $49 million dollar impact on spending, as cited in the recent report* by the Long Island Association, the region's largest business and civic organization. As one of the North Fork's largest employers, Eastern Long Island Hospital employees about 560 people, many healthcare professionals with significant incomes. The impact of the direct spending of local hospital personnel on the North Fork economy in goods and services is in excess of $24 million, enabling all our local industries to thrive. The Hospital is asking the community to rally behind our legislators and show your support for their efforts.

"The Board of Trustees and Administration at Eastern Long Island Hospital applaud the courage and common sense of our state legislators, especially our state senator, Kenneth P. LaValle, in rejecting the massive cuts the Governor is proposing," states Paul J. Connor, III, President and Chief Executive Officer.

To provide the necessary revenue to restore funding to healthcare, education and higher education, the Legislature agreed to several broad-based revenue mechanisms including a one-quarter percent increase in the sales tax and a temporary personal income tax surcharge on higher-income residents. Health care is a crucial public good that benefits the entire community and it is appropriate and equitable that it is supported through broad-based revenue mechanisms.

"The Board of Trustees, Administration and Hospital Staff thank you for being a partner in our collective mission to meet the health care needs for all the people of the North Fork and Shelter Island, so that we can continue to be there for our community, 365 days a year, 24 hours a day, seven days a week," adds Mr. Connor.

Don't DWI: A Great New Service Arrives

The main roads, back roads and short cuts of the Hamptons are now a safer place thanks to a new car service, appropriately labeled, "DIAL-A-DRIVER."

But this isn't any old taxi service. In fact, it's a brand-new concept, introduced by Jason Carey, in which people get to drive home in their own cars without being behind the wheel.

"At no point does the passenger get into our vehicle," said Carey, who explained that once a customer calls (1-877-DON'T-DWI), a driver is dispatched to chauffeur the client in their own car. Another driver follows the pair in a company car. This way, Carey said, people can drive themselves to restaurants or friends' houses in their own vehicles without worrying about leaving their cars behind. Drivers use the utmost discretion when arriving at the caller's location and will usually get dropped off down the street so that it doesn't call attention to the customer, said Carey.

All drivers have a chauffeur license, have taken a defensive-driver class and have been trained in maneuvering different types of cars, according to Carey. There is also a chauffeur service available to customers needing a one-way ride.

A yearly membership is required and costs $25 for an individual and $75 for a family. The catch is that people also have to pay per pickup, which runs the $50 during season (Memorial Day to Labor Day) and $40 during winter. Although the first five miles are included in this pick-up charge, it costs $2 each additional mile, and there are surcharges such as $10 to drop off additional passengers and a waiting charge of $2 per minute.

Of course, one could opt for the platinum seasonal package that costs $2000, in which passengers are picked up at no cost and with no mileage charges. Members have access to a direct phone line with the service, and can also make reservations for pick ups in advance. All members of DIAL-A-DRIVER are also entitled to discounts with affiliates of the company, which have yet to be determined.

Although this may seem pricey to the average drinker, Carey said that if you add up the risks of getting a DWI, his service is pretty reasonable.

"What does a DWI cost you?" asked Carey, who listed lawyer expenses, the cost of a new car, and the loss of life as possibilities of payment. "Our service is for those who can't afford to get DWIs."

But it's not just original thinking that led Carey to invest in the same business in New Zealand ten years ago. It also had to do with a friend of his being killed by a drunk driver. Carey was also in the Army for seven years, in which his unit's responsibility was "dignitary protection," and his duty was to look after people in positions of authority.

It all came together one night, when one of his bosses had too much to drink, got into the chauffeured car and remarked, "I'm so lucky to have designated drivers."

A year later, when Carey left the Army, he became a partner in "DIAL-A-DRIVER," which spread like wildfire to neighboring Australia and later England. While the business boomed, Carey continued to travel around the world, first living in California, then London, France and Switzerland.

It was while living in Switzerland that he came to Southampton to visit an old friend from the Army. He loved the area so much that he quit his job running a chain of restaurants and returned to Long Island a week later. He moved to Bridgehampton and began working at Wölffer Farm as a sales manager, all the while figuring out how to open DIAL-A-DRIVER in the Hamptons.

After discussing the idea with Wölffer's accountant and computer consultant, they jumped on board as investors and, after two years at the vineyard, Carey quit his job. He found sponsors such as Budweiser, ABL Computer Inc., and Hampton Feng Shui, but finding insurance to cover the innovative concept took a bit longer than expected.

"They say lawyers are the worst people in the world," joked Carey. "I disagree; insurance companies are."

After three years of negotiations, Carey said he finally found coverage for $1.5 million in liability and said it took so long because this type of car service is a brand-new concept in America.

"New Zealand was more forward thinking," Carey reasoned. "I wasn't held down with bureaucracy."

With approximately 8,000 members at the height of DIAL-A-DRIVER's popularity in Auckland, New Zealand, Carey said he will have to judge how many cars and drivers he will need in ratio to the number of members who sign up during the busy Hamptons' season.

And the idea is finally gaining momentum, as Carey's sponsors came through and have decorated the company cars with their logos. Local authorities are also smitten, and Carey said he is waiving membership and allowing discounted rates to the Hamptons' police and fire departments. He also said he is in negotiations about the possibility of franchising the business.

Carey believes parents with children will benefit the most from his service. For example, if a household opts for the family membership in which the kids can call themselves to get picked up, the parents will not only know they will arrive home safe but will also be aware of where they have gone. An itemized statement is sent to members at the end of each month, said Carey.

"The greatest thing about it, is that parents can keep track of their kids," explained Carey.

Away At School . . . By David Lion Rattiner

It's Coming

It's always so much fun to go and see a movie. You get your ticket. You debate on what size popcorn you are going to get. Should you go with the gigantic sized popcorn and only pay three dollars extra? Should you go for the Twizzlers or the M&M's? Coke or a Sprite?

Every so often, an epic movie comes out. I'm not talking about a movie that you decide to go and see when you show up at the theater. I'm talking about a movie that you wait three years to hit the theaters. The kind of movie that just the mere thought of it being made gets you excited. I'm talking about the kind of movie that have cults and religions created from them.

I like to label these kinds of movies "ridiculously awesome movies." I have about six movies on my ridiculously awesome list: Terminator 2, Jurassic Park, Ghostbusters, Matrix, Spaceballs, and Forrest Gump. The old Star Wars movies are in there as well.

It has been nearly four years since I have seen a ridiculously awesome movie. Yes, Harry Potter was good, but I just can't say that it was ridiculously awesome. I have been waiting and watching and waiting and watching, but nothing has really hit me at that level yet. Well, that is, until just yesterday.

Yesterday I saw an amazing thing. I was walking out of the gymnasium at Northeastern University after playing some pick up basketball. On the way out of the locker room there is a small bin to drop your towel into. Directly above this bin is a television that generally plays ESPN or some other channel that has a game on.

While throwing my towel in the bin I noticed that on the television screen was not the usual Boston Celtics game, but the closing scenes to a car commercial. My towel hit the bottom of the bin, the car commercial ended. Suddenly a preview came on.

It was a preview for The Matrix Reloaded.

The second that the preview began, one by one, young, alpha males approached the television set with eyes glued and backs straight. "Here it is! Here it is!" one of the guys yelled.

They started to flock to the television like moths to a flame. Dozens started fighting their way to the front. I braced my hands on the towel bin to claim my territory. "Duck down, I can't see!" I leaned over with my hands on the towel bin and tilted my head back as far as I could in order to see the screen.

What I saw was amazing.

There were thirty or forty of us gathered around the set, watching in awe. I think some guys were drooling. There was a motorcycle stunt where a woman jumps off of the building and lands with her left leg swooped out in a beautiful, praying mantis/cat-like landing. There is Keanu Reeves fighting off hundreds of cloned agents with a giant metal pole. There are new upgraded agents. Somebody runs across a highway, jumps onto the front of a moving Chrysler and completely destroys it. Morpheus is back, Trinity is back, even the guy that was the traitor and killed Tank and Dozer in the first one, IS BACK! The preview ended. I wiped the sweat off of my brow; I tried to calm down. I looked at the group of eighteen- to twenty-something-year-old guys that were standing behind me. All of them still frozen in time, taking in what they had just seen.

The things that must have been running through their easily entertained minds. I can't believe he just jumped on the car and stopped it like that. That motorcycle is so awesome, I wonder what kind it is? Will I be able to get tickets? It is probably sold out. Can you believe that the agents are cloning?

One by one they started filing away from the television. Some were giving high fives to each other. Some were punching and kicking into the air. Some just walked away without saying a word. It was official: I had just seen a ridiculously awesome preview.

For those of you that are reading this and think that action movies are dumb and a waste of money I am truly sorry. But for those of you who have a big X on your calendars for May 15, for those of you who have started wearing black leather ever since the first one came out, for those of you who really question all of the time whether or not we are actually living in the Matrix, I have this to say: buy your tickets in advance and don't drive your car too fast after you have seen it.

I'll see you all at the movies.

THE QUESTION ABOUT SALMON?

There has been a recent spate of articles announcing what appears to be alarming news regarding a potentially harmful but commonly used pigment found in salmon feed. Farm raised salmon, we are told, would be an unappetizing grayish color without an artificial color enhancement, which is mixed into the fish feed.

Nutritionally speaking, the quality of farm-raised fish does not appear to be inferior – based on current knowledge, according to the USDA. Wild salmon acquire their delicate pink hue naturally by consuming large amounts of shellfish while farm salmon get astaxanthin, a carotenoid and anti-oxidant and other vitamins and minerals from their feed. All species of salmon whether wild or farm-raised are excellent sources of omega-3 fatty acids noted for its health benefits including the ability to lower blood levels of "bad" cholesteraol and plaque buildup.

I believe at this early date the problem lies in truth in labeling. Three major supermarket chains recently agreed to label farm-raised salmon as artificially colored after a lawsuit that was brought against them. Educating the consumer to the differences between farm-raised fish or fish taken from their natural habitat is significant so that the customer can make choices.

I have personally found wild salmon to have superior flavor with fine, firm texture. Yet I will use both the wild and farm-raised according to availability. I have found the wild to have superior flavor with fine, firm texture. Occasionally I will run into some folk who are not disposed towards salmon, period. Here are a couple of recipes that I hope will expand your salmon repertoire and introduce new tastes to the uninitiated. Salmon is loved for its versatility and in the minds of most cooks - easy to prepare.

GRILLED SALMON FILLETS WITH RHUBARB COMPOTE

A deliciously tangy rhubarb compote accompanies slightly, smoky simply prepared grilled salmon

Serves 4-6

For the rhubarb compote

2 1/4 pounds rhubarb, leaves discarded
1 1/4 cups sugar
3 cloves
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
Grated zest of 1 lemon
2 tablespoons lemon juice

For the salmon

4-6 fillets center cut wild salmon, about 6-8 ounces each, skin intact
Olive oil
Vegetable oil to brush or spray on grill
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper

1. Rinse rhubarb stalks and cut into 1-inch pieces. Put into a heavy saucepan with the sugar, cloves, cinnamon, lemon zest and juice. Simmer over low heat until the rhubarb breaks down completely, about 12-15 minutes. Taste to adjust sweetness to your taste. Refrigerate, covered in a suitable container until ready to use.

2. Rinse salmon and pat dry with paper towel. Brush salmon fillets on both sides with olive oil and season with salt and pepper.

3. Preheat a charcoal or gas grill to medium-high. Heavily coat grate with a spray of oil to prevent fish from sticking. Place the salmon skin-side down on the hot grate and grill 5-7 minutes covered. Gently slide a long metal spatula under the fillets to turn over and place on the skin that adheres to the grill. Cover and grill 2-3 minutes longer for medium rare or until desired degree of doneness. Transfer to serving plates and serve with rhubarb compote and a green vegetable such as spinach or asparagus, if desired.

SALMON WITH HORSERADISH CRUST

Just mix the topping, coat the filets and bake for a savory salmon supper. To assure moistness cook the salmon just till slightly pink in the center.

Serves 6

6 6-8 ounce center-cut salmon fillets with skin intact
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper

For the crust

2 large shallots, finely chopped
2 tablespoons prepared horseradish
1 - 1-1/2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons grainy Dijon mustard
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
3 tablespoons finely chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley
3-4 tablespoons dried breadcrumbs, preferably home made
Freshly ground pepper

1. Rinse fish and pat dry with paper towels. Place side by side in a shallow, lightly greased, heatproof Pyrex or ceramic baking pan and sprinkle with salt and freshly ground pepper.

2. In a mixing bowl combine the ingredients for the crust and season to taste with salt and pepper. Evenly spread mixture to coat the top of each filet. Can be prepared several hours ahead to this point. Refrigerate covered with plastic wrap if doing ahead.

Preheat oven to 425 degrees.

3. When ready to serve, bring the salmon to room temperature. Bake on middle rack of preheated oven for 8-10 minutes until springy to the touch and slightly pink in the center. Serve with boiled new potatoes and roasted asparagus, if desired

Chiang Mai: Learn To Cook Thai

It's a long way to go for a cooking class. From the East End, figure on two hours to the airport, ninety minutes early arrival for the international flight, twenty hours in the air, an hour and a half to clear customs and collect your baggage, an hour through Bangkok rush hour traffic (it makes the summer Friday night drive to the Hamptons seem enjoyable), two hours waiting for your bus, a twelve hour bus ride north to Chiang Mai (potentially with a polite Thai in your lap and chickens under your feet if you opt for the cheapest fare), an hour to locate lodging and drop your bags, a twenty minute ride to the Chiang Mai Thai Cookery School in a songtheu (a pickup truck with two parallel benches running lengthwise in the back) and five minutes to sign up for the class. All told, an arduous two-day trip, but you're only hours away from whipping up creations like Tom Yam Goong (Thai Hot and Sour Prawn Soup) and Pla Nin Laad Prik Bai Horapa (Fried fish with Chili and Basil).

Of course with any trip it's not the destination, it's the journey. That philosophy is both apt and lacking when your destination is the Chiang Mai Cookery School. Certainly the journey will open your eyes, but you'll get to eat – and learn how to cook what you eat – when you get there, and that end more than justifies the means.

Thai cuisine has long been considered one of the world's finest traditions of cooking, though much of the food you will find outside of the country's borders will bear only the vaguest resemblance to that of its origins. (Try Kai Kai, on 1st St. just east of 1st Avenue.) True Thai cooking is light, combines a broad palate of flavors and is intensely spicy. (In most restaurants the cook will prepare the same dish two different degrees of spicy, one for the farangs, or foreigners, and one for the locals. Be cautious about going local style.)

Regardless of how long it takes you to get there, the city of Chiang Mai is necessary stop and despite the fact that it is Thailand's second largest city, it retains a far more traditional and easygoing way of life than that of Bangkok to the south. Temples are located throughout the city, bicycles outnumber motorbikes and a large moat and ancient walls surround the inner city. The journey north is a welcome change from the smothering smog and perpetual noise of Bangkok. It also serves as a convenient point from which to take trips to the surrounding hill tribes and small villages nearby – not to mention a great place to get a taste of Thai culture.

There are a number of cooking schools in Chiang Mai and reports from fellow travelers were positive about almost every school. More by chance than thorough investigation I found myself at the Chiang Mai Cookery School and it was two days of blissful learning and eating. The school runs classes ranging from one to five days in length with prices from 900 baht to 4,200 baht ($20 to $100) and convenient hours from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. From instruction in ingredients and paste making (the signature of Thai cooking) to a tour of the market and quick lessons in how to bargain, the class I took was a delightful blend of cooking, chatting up travelers from around the globe and eating.

The facilities bear more of a resemblance to a professional cooking school in the states or Europe, though the cooking area is no more than a roof over a tiled area. The layout is designed to maximize Sompon, the teacher's movements through the space and reduce the amount of smoke created when someone burns their dish (and someone will burn their dish). Moving quickly through the basic ingredients, explaining each one and following the cookbook which you receive with the course, on the first day of classes I took we first prepared a green curry with chicken and then Phad Thai. Food processor is a foreign word and an unknown convenience and every curry was prepared laboriously and lovingly with a mortar and pestle from raw ingredients. Julia Childs never had it so rough.

In the afternoon we made, among other dishes Thai fruits with sugar, salt and chili powder and water chestnuts with sugar syrup and coconut milk. Both were sweet and refreshing and a perfect compliment to the dishes we had made that morning. Day two was more of the same, new dishes, new people in the class, a few old hands sticking around for a couple extra days and plenty of joking about who was burning what and how much quality time we were spending with mortars and pestles. It was delightful.

Few culinary experiences I have had can compare to those couple of days of cooking in Chiang Mai. I went for the journey and found the destination and every minute was worth it. If you have a couple weeks free this summer, I highly recommend the class.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"The Aberrant Architectures of Diller + Scofido" At The Whitney

Architectural design has always held a special fascination for this critic; professionally speaking, it's no secret that space and setting are important aspects of the visual arts and their contexts. Personally, however, perhaps that helps explain why this column frequently features installation/conceptual art (although such work does not predominate the East End). What's especially relevant is the fact that yours truly has a spatial disorder. Could that also account for the attraction to space?

Whatever the reasons, the current exhibit at New York's Whitney Museum holds interest for this critic as well as anyone else who cares about urban design. Elizabeth Diller and Richard Scofidio are recognized talents in site – specific artworks, video works and performance pieces.

As with other postmodern examples, their designs cover a range of endeavors. Their work has been described as being like Marcel Duchamp or the Surrealists, where they "explore the advant garde tradition of making the familiar strange..."

In this regard, the conceptual piece featuring men's white shirts folded and arranged on long suspended shelves becomes a beautiful aesthetic object. There's an obvious attention to materials and the color white, as there is also a calm and comforting use of space with its own grace and rhythm.

Contrary to this, space is employed on the floor with words and images: corporate logo morph from one into the other (i.e. Exxon into Kodak). This serves as a good case for the Team's second theme: the hidden control exerted over consumers and the sameness of big business.

Another use of space features moving robots on a conveyor belt contained in a large glass case. It's called "Master/Slave" where the robots are subject to a security surveillance system. The metal mechanical objects provide a good contrast to the display of shirts folded on the shelves.

What's particularly intriguing is the window in the gallery space, which overlooks Madison Avenue. It's as if the building reflected in the window is also watching the robots and us, the viewer. Obviously, the reflection is not part of the installation, but it very well could be, adding a dimension beyond the teams' original intention.

The show will be on view at the Whitney until May 25, 2003.

Honoring the Artist: Cornelia Foss

Cornelia Foss is somewhat of an enigma. On one hand, she represents an archetypal "earth mother," known for both her kind, nurturing acts existing on a literal, personal level and for her landscapes prevailing on a figurative, professional plane.

But this intuitive earth mother defies any definitions. She is grounded emotionally not only in the East End's beloved terrain but also in the real world where intellect, achievements and insight predominate. Simple put, Ms. Foss also likes to think, accepting activities that challenge ways of knowing.

The emotional side of Ms. Foss is apparent in all that she paints. As she says simply, "The moment we reach Comack from New York (where she lives part of the year with musician husband, Lukas Foss) I can see the light change drastically, the deep shadows appearing. As we arrive at our home, I see the fields which are so dear to my heart."

Is it no wonder, then, that this week's cover, "Sagaponack Fields," serves as a good representative of Ms. Foss' attachment to the local setting? It's a penchant she swears will continue for "the rest of my life." Even so, Ms. Foss love of the land had its origins many years ago, growing up amidst Italy's hills and valleys. Yet, her art background didn't stop there.

"I was twelve years old when I started drawing lessons," Ms. Foss recalls fondly. "Both my parents, who were archeologists, also took me to museums at an early age. That doesn't mean they necessarily encouraged me to be an artist, however." Ms. Foss laughs at the thought.

Ms. Foss' equally prevailing intellectual side allows her to ponder more universal concepts. For example, when asked what makes good art, she says without missing a beat, "The greatest challenge is to make the work a likeness and a good painting." When asked about what she teaches her students, she doesn't hesitate: "To see." (Versus "to look.")

Faced with the question, "What makes a painting?" Ms. Foss takes a bit more time to answer: "Painting is a continuing tradition of translating visual, multidimensional experience, transforming line and colors onto a two-dimensional paper."

She continues in a heartfelt way. "This visual means stretches the language into new meanings and meaning into a new language. But mainly it comes down to evolving a kindred understanding of the intensity of something— a cup of hot coffee as Fairfield Porter did, or an endless horizon, a field of flowers, or perhaps just the color yellow."

In this one definition, Ms. Foss effectively combines both her emotional and intellectual selves.

Ms. Foss will be exhibiting her work at DFN Gallery in Soho. 212-334-3400 for information.

IN THE CROSS HAIRS. That deathly, killing, gun-sight viewpoint phrase has found its way into very popular usage to, among other things, describe focus of attention. It alarms this peaceful ol' sentimental gentleman of swing, that the government's policy is now shoot first, talk later. This is the latest strategy in the ongoing battle of good and evil. So, here I am, this doe-eyed, wobbly, Technicolor-Disney Bambi of an individual, tremblin' with movie madness wherein producers decide who is good and who is evil. It can be as arbitrary as: Who do you decide to aim at? In the loose cannons of movie making, the studio set landscapes are littered with moral debris. An explosion is worth a thousand words.

Do you feel the heat? Summertime block-busting violence, explodes on the dewy-eyed. Spring motion picture screens early as the X-Men sequel, X 2, beats similar cartoon BLAM-POWS to the punch. Waiting in the wings, with their own alleged, expensive weapons of mass destruction are The Hulk and Matrix Reloaded, so this preemptive strike makes sense. Or does it? In fact, X 2, is better than X-Men because in the shooting gallery, hit and miss battlefield of good and evil, X 2's villains aren't all swarthy and wearing a big black moustache and little black beret. Instead, the enemy is, in a sense, us, we normals, weakly at war with an aberrant species of mutant savants-weird twists of nature with unbelievable gifts who use their powers to protect the normals, in spite of being ostracized by them. These are the X-Men and a coterie of female Xs, who are equally stupendous and heroic.

The comic book hero is as phenomenal a force as the fictional characters themselves. For those of you who do not marvel at Marvel Comic's roster of raw, primary-color-clad bulks, equipped with extraordinary abilities furnished by huge muscles inflated with adolescence. There is no fiercer anger than adolescence's vulnerability. After all, isn't it human frailty that produces a need for excessive power.

The rootin'-tootin' mutants are growing in number and versatility. If they go for X 3, score cards will have to be given to know who's on first. Positions and statistics will be of help, too. Whiskered Wolverine (Hugh Jackman) with fingernails done by Edward Scissorhands, continues to brood and bay and, claw out the doughy centers of hero bread (just kidding!). The telekinetic Jane Grey (Famke Janssen) is still drawn to him and weather lady, Storm (Halle Berry) can still whip-up same. Mystique's (Rebecca Romyn-Stamos) shapely, shape-shifting body is still only covered with a thin coat of poster blue and three scales. We know about French kissing but Rogue (Anna Paquin) has a kiss that can suck the very life out of someone (dating is tough). There's the oculist's dream, Cyclops (James Marsden) and Pyro (Aaron Stanford) who puts BIC lighters to shame. A grand addition is a reptilian German named Nightcrawler (Alan Cumming). He is creepy and enthralling.

The oppressed mutants are divided. Some fight for equal rights and some are fierce segregationists. In Harry Potter manner the leaders are brittle Brits. Magneto (Ian McKellen) for Mutant Power and benevolent-for-integration, Prof. Xavier (Patrick Stewart) who sharpened and polished his bald head to make a fine point for understanding. Added to the mix is a human (sort-of) ex-army commander, Stryker (the wonderful Brian Cox). He's a crazed government scientist/right wing, hate monger.

As a persecuted minority, feared by the normals, the mutants teetered on the nasty edge of total repression. When things heated up, Stryker took advantage of it, to play on the fears of the humans and push through his agenda. Radicals behave that way. I won't say more, you know my leanings.

There have been many times when I've felt like these X people, part of a wandering tribe of abandoned children – very different. There are a lot of folks like us – sort of square pegs, people of color, artists, gays, even some mechanics. The X Men are out there trying to be themselves. I admire that, even if they are talking to us from crude cartoon panels.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-wining European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

Fighting Nature With Nature

Spring is here, and so is allergy season. Airborne pollens and spores trigger itchy eyes, runny noses and head congestion in those who suffer from seasonal sinusitis and hay fever. If you're fed up with being stuffed up, there are things you can do to minimize the effects of seasonal allergies.

Immunity

Allergies are hypersensitive immune reactions to specific substances, such as inhaled pollens from trees, grasses and weeds. Mast cells are a specialized component of the immune system, concentrated in the mouth, throat, nose and lungs. When these specialized cells are stimulated by allergens like pollen, they release histamine and other reactive chemicals that cause swelling and inflammation. A strong and healthy immune system is an important component of managing allergic sinusitis.

Nutrition

A healthy diet can reduce inflammation in the body and lessen allergic symptoms. Niacin, vitamin B3, inhibits the release of histamine from mast cells, but may cause side effects in high doses. Vitamin C can decrease elevated levels of histamine in the blood. Antioxidants, bioflavonoids and essential fatty acids stabilize and strengthen mast cell membranes, inhibiting histamine release and inflammation. They also support the immune system. These nutrients are found in high concentrations in colorful fruits and vegetables.

An anti-inflammatory diet focuses on hypoallergenic foods such as certain fruits, vegetables, whole grains, legumes and cold water fish. It also involves avoidance of foods that increase inflammation, including animal products which contain pro-inflammatory arachadonic acid, hydrogenated oils, trans-fats and foods with high levels of histamine such as shellfish, strawberries, chocolate, sausage and alcohol. Other inflammatory foods include wheat, dairy products, soy, peanuts, citrus fruit, corn and plants in the nightshade family like tomatoes, potatoes and peppers.

For optimal health, drink plenty of pure water and get your daily dose of antioxidants in green and white teas. Eat five servings of fruits and vegetables everyday and stock up on anti-inflammatory foods such as olive oil, avocado, salmon, halibut, sardines, tumeric, cayenne, raw nuts and seeds.

Hydrotherapy

Hydrotherapy is the therapeutic use of water. Techniques specific to sinusitis include steam inhalation, intranasal douche and external applications of alternating hot and cold water. They are used to increase circulation and deliver medicine to sinus and nasal passages. Increased circulation removes waste products and brings nutrients and immune cells to address inflammation. Adding a few drops of Eucalyptus essential oil to steam inhalation clears the sinuses. Intranasal douche, also known as nasal lavage, uses salt water or Hydrastis tea to soothe inflamed sinus passages.

Natural Medicines

When some plants seem like the enemy, others can help you heal. Eyebright (Euphrasia officinalis) can be taken as a preventive measure against seasonal allergies because it strengthens the mucus membranes in the sinuses. It also relieves swelling and inflammation in the eyes and nasal passages. Bioflavonoids such as quercitin and hesperidan are well tolerated and safe for long term use in prevention and management of inflammatory symptoms.

Once sinusitis starts, botanical medicines can be used to reduce symptoms and fight infection. Bromelain, a proteolytic enzyme found in pineapple, has anti-inflammatory effects when taken away from food. Osha (Ligusticum porteri) relieves congestion. Horseradish* (Armoracia rusticana) thins mucus, preventing build-up of pressure and pain. Oregon Grape* (Mahonia species) soothes inflamed and engorged tissues.

Ask your doctor about appropriate dosages. Seek medical attention for health problems and always consult a licensed practitioner trained in the use of natural medicines before taking any supplements. Tell your health care provider about any medicines that you are taking, whether they are natural or conventional.

The Bottom Line

When a healthy diet is combined with natural medicines and hydrotherapy, symptoms of sinusitis often improve. Long term success is associated with a lifestyle emphasizing prevention of illness rather than management of disease. Talk to our doctor about options that are right for you and make this your best allergy season yet.

Police Blotter

Two tickets to paradise eventually transformed into two tickets to the slammer for a pair of half-siblings from East Hampton. The man, age 32, and his half sister, 27, had robbed a safe at a local restaurant during the summer. Two East End police agencies collaborated on an investigation and eventually pinpointed the two as definite suspects. They were arrested and charged with third-degree burglary.

If you're shopping at the Bridgehampton Commons any time soon, be sure keep tabs on your wallet. Since the end of April many reports have been filed regarding stolen purses and wallets. In the past two weeks, four complainants, one at Kmart and three at King Kullen, reported to police the theft of their credit cards, identification and cash. The investigations continue.

We sane folk sure hope this next guy gets the book thrown at him. A 22-year-old from Remsenburg punched his wife, who was 8 months pregnant at the time, in the stomach after she removed her wedding ring to go to bed. He was arrested by Southampton Town Police last Saturday at his home and charged with third degree assault.

During an eight-day period in April, video surveillance cameras at an East End resort recorded some interesting footage involving an unknown couple. It seems the two had keys to the resort's indoor pool and, under the cover of night, they would enter the facility and take a dip. After the realization that the two had been doing this, the resort changed the locks to the pool. The next night the couple returned to the pool area and was confronted by an employee at which time the two trespassers laughed and left the grounds. As they drove away, the employee was able to record the license plate number. The dipping duo has not been identified.

It wasn't a bench warrant that called police to Main Street in East Hampton, but it was a bench that warranted police presence early last Sunday morning. It appeared that some devilish youths decided to move a park bench into the middle of the road. The bench was returned to its rightful position by responding officers.

Twice last summer, I personally experienced the wrath of situations like this next one. I've written about it in this column as well. A dark and devious criminal reached deep into my personal space before wrenching the beating heart from within the very epicenter of my soul. They took my fishing gear! A Virginia native phoned police in Montauk last Saturday after he discovered that someone had removed the reels from the fishing rods that were locked on top of his truck. Employees of the bar and grill where the man's truck was parked were unable to give police any information as no one had witnessed the theft. Don't worry my Virginian friend, the thieves that hit you where it counts will pay with years of bad fishing karma.

Dan's Letters

THINK LOCALLY, ACT LOCALLY
Dear Dan,

When reading the latest edition of your paper, I noticed the advertisement for your "Potato-Hampton" minithon. Although I think it is wonderful to support an organization like the National Multiple Sclerosis Society Long Island Chapter, I have to wonder why you would not put your efforts towards an East End organization that could use the funding support.

There are many East End not-for-profits, including South Fork Community Health Initiative that are struggling to survive. After this year's deeper budget cuts, many agencies have had to reduce staff and services and the community members who need it most are feeling the effects of these latest budget cuts. A lot of these agencies are too small to handle fundraising and therefore rely completely on grants, town, county and state funding, and private donations. We need successful businesses like yours to help support the work we do.

For example, SFCHI has been around for thirty-five years and it has always been a struggle to stay afloat. We work with the medically indigent and have had a huge increase in our numbers over the last three or four years, but at the same time have suffered many budget cuts. Without agencies like ours, these families would have no place to go for help.

I am writing in the hope that maybe next year you will consider raising money for your own community members. Since you are raising the money on the East End, shouldn't it stay on the East End? There are many large organizations that throw fundraisers in the Hamptons each summer and raise a lot of their money here, but very little of that money ever finds its way back to the people of the Hamptons.

Thank you for your time.

Diane Mercieca

The "Dan's Papers PotatoHampton Minithon" has raised more than $100,000 for a half dozen charities during the last 25 years. Maybe we'll get around to the SFCHI. –D.R.

EVERYBODY SING ALONG
Dear Dan,

Your article, "Songs," in the April 18, 2003 issue of Dan's Papers, contains incorrect partial lyrics of the song "Wabash Cannonball."

The song was not written in 1933, as you stated. A man named Hugh Cross, and the vocal done by harmonica player Dynamite Hatcher first recorded it in 1929. Roy Acuff was also on the recording, but he did not sing, he supplied the imitation train whistle. Roy Acuff later recorded the song with his own vocal, and accompanied by his band, The Smokey Mountain Boys, in 1947, on the Columbia label, #C143-5, 20197, (HC0 2207).

A.P. Carter is listed as the writer of the song, but given his song-collecting habits he could not have written the song. Carter traveled extensively throughout the southeastern United States during the 1920's and 1930's collecting songs from a variety of people. We are indebted to Carter for preserving a great number of songs, which probably would have been lost. However, when Carter realized that many of the songs he had collected, which had been passed along from one generation to another, and no one knew who the authors were, he simply applied his name as the author, copyrighted the songs, and then collected the royalties from their use. Carter made a great deal of money doing this.

The song also has nothing to do with the people of northern Michigan connecting them to the outside world. The song is actually a traditional derivation, telling of a mythical train that would carry the hobo to the land of fantasy. The original stanzas of the "Wabash Cannonball" are printed in George Milburn, Hobo's Hornbook, (New York: Ives and Washburn, 1930).

Whatever your research source was on the Internet was incorrect. Don't believe everything you see on the Internet. It's filled with inaccuracies on almost every subject.

Enclosed are the correct lyrics for the song. "Wabash Cannonball".

Get it right!

Richard Fuller

Wabash Cannonball

From the great Atlantic Ocean to the wide Pacific shore,
From the queen of rolling mountains, to the south bell by the moor.
She's a mighty tall and handsome and know quite well by all,
She's the combination of the Wabash Cannonball.

She came down from Birmingham one cold December day,
As she pulled into the station, you could hear the people say.
There's a girl from Tennessee; she's long and she's tall,
She came down from Birmingham on the Wabash Cannonball.

Now the eastern states are dandy so the people always say,
From New York to St. Louis and Chicago by the way.
From the hills of Minnesota where the rippling waters fall,
No changes can be taken on the Wabash Cannonball.

Listen to the jingle, the rumble and the roar,
As she glides along the woodlands, through the hills and by the shore.
Hear the might rush of the engine, hear the lonesome hoboes call,
You're traveling through the jungles on the Wabash Cannonball.
